

Storekeepers Testify Miners Looted Stocks

Three Asset Over $3,000 Shoes and Clothing Were Seized by Marchers; One Later Received $372

Told to Charge It to Local Other Witnesses at Treason Trial Tell of Threats Against the Government

CHARLESTOWN, W. Va., May 3 (By The Associated Press).—Proprietors of stores from which men engaged in the armed march last year obtained shoes, clothing and groceries were among the thirteen witnesses heard today in circuit court, where William Blizard is being tried for treason. Other testimony covered many incidents of the march and fighting and in great part was in corroboration of evidence previously heard.

Nathan Haddad, whose general store at Cletcher, started the list of complaining merchants with a report of more than $1,000 worth of shoes gone, but not paid for. A. R. Browning, who had a general store at Blair, estimated $2,000 as his loss. Mike August, Blair grocer, fixed $372 as the value of his goods, but said that this year he had received a check for that amount in payment.

Told Him to Charge It to Local

Haddad said many of the armed men whom he saw in Cletcher came into his store to get shoes, riding breeches and leggings, and that they said to charge the goods to the "local," but not knowing which local, he could not collect. He knew Philip Murray, international vice-president of the United Mine Workers, and saw him a few days later, Murray promising that he would be paid for the shoes, according to his testimony. The men also got two dozen red handkerchiefs, and two or three men paid for shoes they got. Some were "polite enough" to ask him to wait on them and some helped themselves. Haddad said that he did not know who they were, but that he saw them in the streets of Cletcher, and that he saw them in the streets of Cletcher, and that he saw them in the streets of Cletcher.

Hanging of Government Suggested

A suggestion that they go to Charleston, burn the newspaper offices and hang the government, was attributed to some of the armed men by J. N. Stone, of Charleston, contractor and friend of Blizard. A group of about fifteen men passed the place where he was at work in Winfield Junction, he said, and some of those in the group were doing the talking. This witness also told of hearing men say they were watching every train that came to Marmet from Charleston for state police and would kill any who got off the train.

Testimony of Emmett Ferrell that he was hit in the hip by one of the many bullets fired at him when he disobeyed the order of an armed group to be admitted over the objections of the defense.

Savoy Holt, one of the men indicted with Blizard on the treason charge, said: "To hell with martial law, we'll wipe it out." James K. King, indicted King also testified that Blizard was at miners' headquarters in a Blair school-house and when asked about the lighting at Crooked Run, Kanawha, he answered: "We are gaining ground." Previous testimony that during a dispute over authority Charles Green had declared: "We got orders direct from Blizard."

Anthracite Miners Want Two Federal Inquiries

Operators Vote Against Plan to Investigate Freight Rates and Coal-Selling Agencies

The lethargy which has settled over the quiet gatherings of the anthracite scale committee in the dicker for a new agreement in the hard coal fields was dispelled momentarily yesterday when the miners' representatives offered a resolution attacking freight rates and asking the Interstate Commerce and Federal Trade commissions to investigate both matters.

Two Inquiries Demanded

The conclusion of the resolutions submitted by the miners was as follows: "Resolved, First, that an investigation should at once be made by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the freight rates charged on the transportation of anthracite coal, with the intent in view of ordering a reduction of such rates if they are found to be unjust and unreasonable, and second, that the Federal Trade Commission should at once investigate all agencies which have been established for the handling and sale of anthracite coal, extending from the mines to the consumers, with the intent in view of recommending measures of relief from unwarranted costs and profits."

The four miners' representatives on the committee voted for the resolutions. The operators' quartet balloted against them.

Speaking for the operators, Samuel D. Warriner said later that while the operators had advocated reductions in freight rates, they did not want to go fishing up any side streams, "inasmuch as the main issue was the reaching of a new wage agreement. The miners issued a statement backing up the contents in their resolutions and directed several sharp raps at the operators for "unwillingness to cooperate" and for maintaining a "monopoly, indefensibly exploiting the consumer."

This and an announcement by Samuel Untermyer, chief counsel for the Lockwood committee, saying that body would not attempt to inquire into the anthracite situation at this time, were the chief events of the day in connection with the negotiations. Mr. Untermyer's announcement concluded as follows:

"There is no doubt from the investigation that has been made that the price of anthracite coal is excessive."

Miss Minns's Collection of Art Symbols Purchased by Whitney Warren, Who Is Directing Rebuilding

Purchases amounting to approximately $12,000 were made last night by Whitney Warren from the Susan Minns collection relative to "The Dance of Death," to provide a nucleus for a similar collection in the library of the University of Louvain, being rebuilt under the direction of Mr. Warren as the gift of the American people. The purchases were made possible by the generosity of Miss Minns, who provided the amount necessary. More than eighty items, including the collections of coins and medals and various books and engravings representing the curious use of the symbol of death in early art, were obtained to replace the collection in the war-devastated French museum.

Rare Volumes of Vail Library Bring Big Prices

The sale of the Theodore N. Vail library continued yesterday at the Anderson Galleries, with important disposals during afternoon and evening sessions contributing to the existing total of $51,175.75.

Mrs. Mayo Wanted Cash, but Not Baby, Affidavit Asserts

Friend Says Broker's Wife Told Him All She Desired Was to "Stick Husband for the Rest of His Life"

The efforts of Roy A. Mayo, a broker, to prove to Justice Burr, of the Supreme Court, yesterday that Mrs. Charlotte Catherine Mayo was not entitled to receive alimony and counsel fees pending the husband's suit for divorce were unsuccessful, the justice denying Mr. Mayo's motion to set aside the allowance made her by the court.

Friend Says Broker's Wife Told Him All She Desired Was to "Stick Husband for the Rest of His Life"

In support of his motion, Mr. Mayo submitted an affidavit by Harold Robertson. This said that on November 2, last, Robertson was invited by Mrs. Charlotte Mayo to her home, where he met the two women at the hotel and accompanied them, in an automobile on a shopping tour. They stopped at several Fifth Avenue shops, and Mrs. Mayo is quoted as saying that she had made several purchases of jewelry and wearing apparel. On the way back to the hotel, according to Mr. Robertson, Mrs. Mayo told him she was "having a hell of a time" and that she had met "a number of live ones."

After the members of the party had taken two drinks of whisky, said Mr. Robertson, Mrs. Mayo said, "I don't care about his alimony and I don't need it, but I intend to stick him for the rest of his life. As for the baby, he is welcome to it."

Mr. Mayo also told the court in his application to vacate the alimony order that his wife has been paying $25 a day for her hotel suite and that she owns a $1,000 mink coat, besides other jewelry and apparel.

Mrs. Mayo denied all of her husband's statements as well as those of James O. Bryant, of Memphis, for $100,000, alleging he alienated the affections of Mrs. Mayo.

Mrs. Mayo is a daughter of Mrs. E. C. Cheatham, who disappeared from her home at Coney Island, leaving her clothing in a bathroom locker, apparently to create the impression of suicide. She was heard from subsequently, being found in good health.

Mack Trucks Profits $225,197

The report of the Mack Trucks, Inc., for the quarter ended March 31, 1922, showed net profits of $225,197, after depreciation. This compared with net profits of $4,395 in the corresponding quarter in 1921. March earnings totaled more than $300,000, sufficient, it was stated, to absorb the slight customary seasonal loss in January and February and leave a profit for the first three months of this year equal to quarterly dividends on both preferred stocks.
